

Prayers for the Earth

Earth Song

It's an earth song,—
And I've been waiting long for an earth song.
It's a spring song,—
And I've been waiting long for a spring song.
 Strong as the shoots of a new plant Strong as the bursting of new buds Strong as the coming of the first child from its mother's womb.
It's an earth song,
A body song,
A spring song,
I have been waiting long for this spring song.

~ Langston Hughes

Small Prayer

Thank you for the apples like berries that color the trees and the sky.
I want to leap and talk and then sleep in the air where your fruits ripen and dance.
Mother of earth, this is my prayer!
Oh yes — at night when we turn from father light please cover my cloud bed with your phosphorescence.
Thank you for your apples.

~ Scott Chaskey

The Garden is Rich

The garden is rich with diversity
With plants of a hundred families In the space between the trees
With all the colours and fragrances.
Basil, mint and lavender, Great Mystery keep my remembrance pure, Raspberry, Apple, Rose,
Great Mystery fill my heart with love, Dill, anise, tansy,
Holy winds blow in me.
Rhododendron, zinnia,
May my prayer be beautiful May my remembrance O Great Mystery Be as incense to thee
In the sacred grove of eternity
As I smell and remember The ancient forests of earth.

~ Chinook Psalter

Lord, the air smells good today, straight from the mysteries within the garden of God.
The trees in their prayer,
the birds in praise,
the first blue violets, Kneeling.

~ Rumi

Canticle of the Creatures

All praise be yours, My Lord through all that you have made.

And first my lord Brother Sun, who brings the day...
How beautiful is he, how radiant in all his splendor!
Of you, Most High, he bears the likeness.

All praise be yours, my Lord, through Sister Moon and Stars;
In the heavens you have made them, bright and precious and fair.

All praise be yours, my Lord, through Brothers Wind and Air...

All praise be yours, my Lord, through Sister Water, So useful, lowly, precious and pure.

All praise be yours, my Lord, through Brother Fire, through whom you brighten up the night...

All praise be yours, my Lord, through Sister Earth, our mother, Who feeds us...and produces various fruits With colored flowers and herbs...

Praise and bless my Lord, and give him thanks,
And serve him with great humility.

A Prayer In Spring

Oh, give us pleasure in the flowers to-day;
And give us not to think so far away
As the uncertain harvest; keep us here
All simply in the springing of the year.

Oh, give us pleasure in the orchard white,
Like nothing else by day, like ghosts by night;
And make us happy in the happy bees,
The swarm dilating round the perfect trees.

And make us happy in the darting bird
That suddenly above the bees is heard,
The meteor that thrusts in with needle bill,
And off a blossom in mid air stands still.

For this is love and nothing else is love,
The which it is reserved for God above To sanctify to what far ends He will,
But which it only needs that we fulfil.

~ Robert Frost

i thank You God for most this amazing day:for leaping greenly spirits of trees and a blue true dream of sky; and for everything which is natural which is infinite which is yes —

Characteristics of Life

A fifth of animals without backbones could be at risk of extinction, say scientists. — BBC Nature News

Ask me if I speak for the snail and I will tell you I speak for the snail.

 speak of underneathness and the welcome of mosses, of life that springs up, little lives that pull back and wait for a moment.

I speak for the damselfly, water skeet, mollusk, the caterpillar, the beetle, the spider, the ant.

 I speak from the time before spinelessness was frowned upon.

Ask me if I speak for the moon jelly. I will tell you one thing today and another tomorrow and I will be as consistent as anything alive on this earth.

 I move as the currents move, with the breezes.
What part of your nature drives you? You, in your cubicle ought to understand me. I filter and filter and filter all day.

Ask me if I speak for the nautilus and I will be silent as the nautilus shell on a shelf. I can be beautiful and useless if that's all you know to ask of me.

Ask me what I know of longing and I will speak of distances between meadows of night-blooming flowers.

 I will speak the impossible hope of the firefly.

You with the candle burning and only one chair at your table must understand such wordless desire.

To say it is mindless is missing the point.

~ Camille T. Dungy

Dragonfly, in your wings
The light reflecting all Earth's glory,
The spark of all beginning, the dance of life,
The network linking all existence, storied web.
You speak of the good air that lifts, that wraps our globe in breath
That carries song and scent and hum on every breeze.
The force of rushing stream, the still pool's depths,
The source extending veins through earth, and you, and me.
Your eyes tell of the multitude of every life that was,
The passage of millennia, ancestral gifts;
The magic of our dreams that match your skill in flight;
The joy of rage uprising with ferocity of life;
The power of grief, the lessons learned of pain;
The burden of the many years gone by and all that are to come;
The gift of rest: when stilled
That light may catch our wings
And reflect again
The glory and the dance.

~ Isabel Jones

In Praise of Trees

I speak a prayer for the trees, for the skin of the trees, the leaves of the trees,
the roots of the trees,
the earth under the trees, and the water that nourishes the trees.
I thank our Creator and speak a prayer for the birds of the trees and the canopy of the trees in which the birds shelter.
I thank the one presence, the great giver of all that is.
I thank the holy one, always and forever, for trees.

~ Rev. Lulu Logan

August

No wind, no bird. The river flames like brass.
On either side, smitten as with a spell Of silence, brood the fields. In the deep grass, Edging the dusty roads, lie as they fell Handfuls of shriveled leaves from tree and bush.
But 'long the orchard fence and at the gate, Thrusting their saffron torches through the hush, Wild lilies blaze, and bees hum soon and late.
Rust-colored the tall straggling briar, not one Rose left. The spider sets its loom up there Close to the roots, and spins out in the sun
A silken web from twig to twig. The air Is full of hot rank scents. Upon the hill Drifts the noon's single cloud, white, glaring, still.

Drifting Flowers of the Sea

Across the dunes, in the waning light,
The rising moon pours her amber rays,
Through the slumbrous air of the dim, brown night
The pungent smell of the seaweed strays—
 From vast and trackless spaces Where wind and water meet, White flowers, that rise from the sleepless deep,
 Come drifting to my feet.
They flutter the shore in a drowsy tune, Unfurl their bloom to the lightlorn sky,
 Allow a caress to the rising moon,
 Then fall to slumber, and fade, and die.

White flowers, a-bloom on the vagrant deep,
Like dreams of love, rising out of sleep,
You are the songs, I dreamt but never sung, Pale hopes my thoughts alone have known,
Vain words ne'er uttered, though on the tongue,
That winds to the sibilant seas have blown.
 In you, I see the everlasting drift of years
 That will endure all sorrows, smiles and tears;
 For when the bell of time will ring the doom
 To all the follies of the human race, You still will rise in fugitive bloom
 And garland the shores of ruined space.

Dear Earth

May you hear our prayer.

Through our greed, hate and ignorance
We have failed you.
You are depleted, poisoned and feverish.
Your living beings are suffering.
Your sickness is getting worse.

Despite our neglect and plunder
You still blossom
With starfish, tundras, apples, icicles, Bison herds, rainforest, blackbird song, Trees that speak to each other underground.

Dear Earth, may you support us As we lean into you and into each other And feel our grief, rage and despair.

May you help us
To hear and hold these feelings with compassion
So that all of our actions can be driven by love.

May you offer us sacred space
So we can allow our connection with you to grow And so we can bless each other over and over.

May you gift us the wisdom
To trust in our uniqueness And discern the small compassionate actions Only we can perform.

May you give us the courage To transform love into action By sharing information, making changes to our daily lives, Speaking truth to power,
And coming together to disrupt and heal our toxic systems.

May you show us
That you are vaster and more complex than we can imagine
And that as we bathe in mystery
We are transformed.

May you teach us to be tender Towards you and all your living beings, Including our own bodies, minds and hearts.

May you remind us to enjoy you
In all your glory
To taste your dark chocolate,
To pause at the sweet scent of jasmine,
To gaze at your oceans,
To kiss the damp grass with our bare feet.

May you ground us in faith
As we step forwards Into an uncertain future
With a quiet, fierce determination.

May you forgive us,
And may we forgive ourselves.

Dear Earth,
With endless gratitude
We dedicate the merit of this prayer to you.

The Archive of Our Relation

I admit, the mourning is constant the names, the words, the whispers colors and textures that were lost, persecuted, poisoned, disinherited, extracted, cut down, shaved, kidnapped, unclaimed, and forgotten. An endless war

I too report, my silence has not saved me yet running water calls spirits hidden in me carefully waiting for me to quiet the mind so they may wake me right on time to witness the great expanse a dance so tender it gently wakes the sun

In gratitude the sun rises offers its power so that we may see all that has been done
all that is yet to come

In humility and courage
I rise, offer my power so that I may see
all that has been done
and you who has yet to become

Tumal sinú may the sun always shine on you a prayer weaved by the most precious parts of me a breath the most potent offering to our becoming

I report, the water, the earth, the seeds and the grace of a dancing sky remain a pure reflection the wealth of our inheritance the heart of our connection
the archive of our relation if we so choose to co-conspire to re-member

Agua es vida, Water is life we are the water and remembering has offered us our lives, love letters bloomed beautiful in anticipation of you travel guides to the ancient futures that are due living memory of gestation and labor humble testimonies conspired in your favor

You see, more than hope we hold a deep knowing all creation moves in circle all that was once dead is reborn the breaking of the seed a necessary violence forgiveness a necessary blooming resistance a necessary rooting rebuilding a defining act of courage letting go a radical act of love

I too agree with trees
I do not shy away from the darkness
Nor do I fear the wind I remember the water and take root in the memory of you the living archive of relation a sweet and sacred confirmation that we are still alive.

In Tall Grass

Bees and a honeycomb in the dried head of a horse in a pasture corner—a skull in the tall grass and a buzz and a buzz of the yellow honey-hunters.

And I ask no better a winding sheet (over the earth and under the sun.)

Let the bees go honey-hunting with yellow blur of wings in the dome of my head, in the rumbling, singing arch of my skull.

Let there be wings and yellow dust and the drone of dreams of honey—who loses and remembers?—who keeps and forgets?

In a blue sheen of moon over the bones and under the hanging honeycomb the bees come home and the bees sleep.

~ Carl Sandburg

“Few will have the greatness to bend history itself, but each of us can work to change a small portion of events. It is from numberless diverse acts of courage and belief that human history is shaped. Each time a man stands up for an ideal, or acts to improve the lot of others, or strikes out against injustice, he sends forth a tiny ripple of hope, and crossing each other from a million different centers of energy and daring those ripples build a current which can sweep down the mightiest walls of oppression and resistance.”

~ Robert F. Kennedy
